

Administrative Relief for Undocumented Immigrants

The President has announced that individuals that meet the following requirements may be eligible for administrative relief:

Deferred Action for Parents

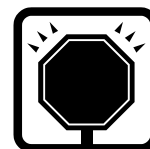

- Must be a parent of US citizens and lawful permanent residents. Does not include parents of only DACA recipients.
- Have continuously resided in the U.S. since 1/1/2010

Expansion of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals

- Arrived in the U.S. before 16th birthday no matter your current age
- Have continuously resided in the U.S. since 1/1/2010
- Are currently in school, have graduated or obtained a certification of completion from high school, or have obtained GED.

REMEMBER:

- * Don't get scammed! Do not pay anyone until there is an official application process. Be careful with notarios and people who are not certified to deal with immigration cases. Make sure you find a qualified lawyer or representative.
- * Prepare your documents.
 - ⇒ Have proof of identity. For example, a valid passport from your country of origin or a birth certificate (with a notarized English translation) and a photo I.D.
 - ⇒ Have proof of your stay in the United States (checks, utility bills, bank accounts, taxes, etc.)
- * Save money. Immigration procedures can be costly.
- * Take action. This executive action is not a permanent solution. The struggle continues to get immigration reform that benefits everyone.
